Haliburton's therapy systems

Hydrotherapy is the use of water in the treatment of stress and pain relief. Generally if you are experiencing tense muscles and anxiety from stress, a hot spa is in order.

This will help you stimulate your body and mind.

When you submerge yourself in a bath, pool or spa you experience a form of weightlessness.

Your body is relieved from the constant pull of gravity.

Water also has a hydrostatic effect.

Aromatherapy - Essential oils inhaled into the lungs are believed to offer psychological benefits.

Scent receptors in the brain are stimulated which, in turn, triggers a response in the part of the brain that influences heart rate, blood pressure, breathing, memory, stress levels and hormone balance.

Aromatherapy essential oils have a marked effect on body, mind and spirit.

The natural way to relax and unwind

Today's Pressure Point System Spa Technology, developed by Canadian Spa Co., can offer specific therapeutic benefits:

- Arthritis - Painful or inflamed joints cause muscles to tense in an effort to protect them. Warm water and hydrotherapy help relax the muscles and allow greater range of motion in the joints.
- Buoyancy - a key element of relaxation and stress relief. It helps overcome the effects of gravity and relieves stress on the joints.
- Exercise - Exercising can cause microscopic tears in the muscle and lactic acid build up. The warm massaging action of a spa will accelerate the healing process.
- Sleep - Warm swirling water reduces stress and allows you to rest and enjoy a better nights sleep.
- Pain Relief - Endorphins are natural painkillers for the body. Warm water stimulates their release.
